COE: RSAP Application:

Instructions:
The Rising Sophomore Abroad Program (RSAP) is a study abroad opportunity for engineering and science students at the end of their first year. The program has two components: a spring semester course and 1-2 weeks of international travel.

Accepted students must register for the course ENGE 1644 (Global STEM Practice: Leadership and Culture). It will meet twice weekly during the Spring 2020 semester. The course is designed to introduce students to global engineering and science practices, emphasize the importance of cultural competency for engineers and scientists, and focus on how differences in cultural, social and economic contexts influence engineering and science work.

The program culminates with travel to one of the ten international tracks offered. Travel will take place very shortly after Spring 2020 final exams. Below is the list of the ten tracks offered for RSAP 2020 with their tentative costs (subject to change). Cost of the program varies by international track. You will be asked to rank your preference for the various tracks in your application.

1. Australia and New Zealand - Track 1, North Island ($4,500)
2. Australia and New Zealand - Track 2, South Island ($4,500)
3. Chile and Argentina ($4,100)
4. China ($4,300)
5. Ecuador and Peru ($4,000)

7. South Africa ($4,300)
8. South Korea and Taiwan ($4,300)

Not included in this fee is the cost of most lunches and dinners and personal expenses.

Financial support is available to students on the basis of financial need. Applicants will be considered for such financial support at a later date, so we encourage you to apply.

To be considered for acceptance, please submit a complete RSAP Application, sign the required signature documents, and submit the $50 application fee.

Final selection of participants will be based on applications, fall academic performance (with continued good academic standing in the spring), and continued good standing with respect to student conduct and honor code.
